Dana Facaros and Michael Pauls are passionate about Europe and have written over 40 books for Cadogan, including several in the Spain series. They have lived all over Europe, but are currently settled in a presbytère in the Lot Valley, France.

I'm not sure of the religion of those responsible for this book, but the ranting and raving about "poor Muslim invaders" and "genocide" and the "evils of Christianity" make this book a ridiculous read. Combined with the supreme misogyny in the sections about Spanish women and culture, and you don't have a guidebook; you have a bizarre, biased guide to Spain - that is wholly anti-Spain. Judging by this book, I assume their guides to the US are about those poor colonials who suffered so much while bringing culture and intelligence to American Indians! Yes, we all know about the Inquisition, but the writing in this book reads like a Putin propaganda announcement!! I can say with absolute honesty that this is the weirdest "guidebook" I've ever read. Stick to the main publishers; these fringe companies are pushing an agenda, not the facts.

Cadogan makes terrific guides for those interested in history.
