Teach From Love: School Year Devotional For Families

Synopsis

Learning and transformation happens when education goes beyond books into the heart. Teach from Love is an inspirational and educational devotional for families to explore and embrace the godly qualities we want for our kids (and for ourselves). It contains thirty-six pairs of weekly character themes designed to be read five days a week for the thirty-six weeks of a school year. Each day includes a Scripture, a short reading, a prayer, and two questions for family discussion. Your family will: Explore Scripture and engage in meaningful discussion. Grow in godly qualities, discovering how to implement them into their daily lives. Understand how to deal with less-desired traits. Learn how they can best imitate and follow Christ. Teach from Love is an encouraging, valuable resource to draw families together and closer to God. Gather for as few as ten minutes or enjoy extended times of family discussion and learning. Pursue true Christian living together, and in the future your children will recall and appreciate this valuable time of connection.

Sam Sorbo offers brilliant, inspired, and thoughtful devotional reflections in Teach from Love for any family or school group interested in drawing closer to God. I commend Sam and her ability to open up the truth of Jesus Christ and His Word written. •Ted Baehr, founder and publisher of Movieguide®, chairman of the Christian Film & Television Commission, educator, and media pundit We removed the Bible from public schools but failed to consider how children would come to learn godly characteristics. In this devotional, Sam Sorbo uses parables and Bible stories to introduce strong values for discussion within families and classrooms. Parents, teachers, and school administratorsâ€”this is for you! â€”Everett Piper, president, Oklahoma Wesleyan University; author, Not a Daycare Teach from Love is a great devotion for any family seeking to raise godly adults. The verses and questions to discuss with your family during the school year will greatly benefit you and your childrenâ€”â€œs souls. â€”Robert Bortins, CEO, Classical Conversations; chairman, Homeschool Now USA â€” We have allowed the ungodly to rule! We have allowed them to influence our culture, dictate our norms, and educate our children. We have seen the results and are pushing back the darkness. Sam Sorbo has given us an excellent tool in that pushback. Teaching the way Jesus taught, using parables and stories, Sam allows you to absorb the issues and information deep within your spirit. She provides great insight to equip truth seekers. â€”Mason Weaver, Mason Media Company Teach from Love is for families everywhere. Sam Sorbo has scratched where most families itch, having created a family devotional that begins and ends with the school year. The chapters are focused, each daily lesson is fully supplied, and every page is designed to instill godly character in the hearts of your children. As a dad who has longed for a resource like this, the search is over with Teach from Love. â€”Todd Wilson, founder, Familyman Ministries â€” Teach from Love empowers todayâ€”â€œs Christian family to grow daily in the grace and knowledge of God. Sam Sorbo delivers a powerful, practical tool thatâ€”â€œs perfect for kids, families, and classrooms everywhere. â€”Bill Blankschaen, author, co-author of You Will Be Made to Care, homeschooling father of six, and former Christian school principal Sam (Jenkins) Sorbo studied biomedical engineering at Duke University before pursuing a career in modeling, which afforded her the opportunity to travel and learn languages; she is fluent in five. Eventually, she moved to Los Angeles for acting, and earned roles in numerous films and TV shows, including Bonfire of the Vanities, Twenty Bucks, Chicago Hope, and Hercules: The Legendary Journeys. As guest star on Hercules, she met Kevin Sorbo, who swept her off her feet. They married in 1998, and she moved to New Zealand. While living in Auckland, Sam published a humorous and educational photo book, Gizmoe: The Legendary Journeys, Auckland. The family grew to include three children. In 2016 Sam authored Theyâ€”â€œre YOUR Kids: An Inspirational Journey from Self- Doubter to Home School Advocate. The Sorbos home educate. She hosted The Sam Sorbo Show, a weekday nationally syndicated radio program. Most recently, Sam cowrote, produced, and costarred in (with Kevin) Let There Be Light, due out Christmas 2017. The film features Dionne Warwick, Travis Tritt, and the two Sorbo boys, is directed by Kevin Sorbo, and is exec-produced by Sean Hannity (LetThereBeLightTheMovie.com).

This may be the most important homeschool book you ever buy. (Though I encourage any parent to buy it-- we're all our children's first teachers.) Nothing matters more than our kids' characters. It's something we all say, and yet rarely do anything about. This book provides a structure to make sure you have an important conversation with your children every single school day. Each devotional includes a verse focusing on a certain aspect of two character traits being studied for that week. I love the depth in the body of each devotional. I enjoy reading them as an adult and my young kids love the content and questions. It is so refreshing to find a simple option that still provide context for character traits that can be instantly grasped and prompts deep discussions. I'm sure we will use this devotional for more than one year-- possibly as prompts for short essays based on each day's topic in future years. I absolutely also recommend reading Sam Sorbo's book about homeschooling "They're Your Kids." Sam homeschooled for all the right reasons and is one of the most passionate voices for homeschooling today.

The cover's open because I just got this book delivered and had to stop right as I opened it to look through it. I read the Forward and the Welcome and skimmed several of the devotionals. Wow. So awesome! I LOVE the arrangement and the ability to share with your children in open discussion and I've loved the entries I've skimmed! I can't wait to start! You must buy!

At one time as an educator for nearly forty years and a loyal member of local, state and teacher associations (before they became like unions) I was very opposed to home schooling and a voucher system. However over the past twenty years I have become appalled at education in our nation as so many schools are failing to provide real learning. Too many teachers from grade school on up to the college level seem to feel they have a responsibility to indoctrinate young minds with their views about society, politics and government. And there has been a growing tendency to want to turn over curriculum planning to the Federal government. I had the opportunity to review one of the best books ever written on home schooling, on education for that matter, written by Sam Sorbo. Her book They're Your Kids traced her journey of being one who doubted to a true believer. The book was also kind of a how to book, how to do the research and get the resources for taking over the education of your children. Now I am not saying there are not good public schools out there, I know of many great ones and I applaud the teachers and administrators who are making a difference. And who are not permitting their schools to become socialist training grounds. Mrs. Sorbo has done it again. She has come up with a marvelous book Teach From Love. It is a daily devotional for use by parents who home school. I also encourage its use by public school teachers who would like to see morality and virtue brought back. I would love to see this book in the classroom, at least for the opportunity to discuss the handling of issues we are faced with in every day life. For example one of the lessons is titled “Wise Choice” and the reading deals with how hard it is to make a choice to do the right thing. Too often in today’s society we are urged to serve ourselves and not family, friends or God who should be first. As an old school guy myself I remember in the fifties that each morning a student would volunteer to read a few Bible verses and lead the class in prayer. Jewish students also participated using readings they brought in. My favorite was a young man who brought in a ram’s horn for a call to worship. You can imagine how that sounded down the hall way of a school. We all learned from such sessions. Teach From Love, which is introduced by Kevin Sorbo, covers each day of school Monday through Friday starting with a Bible verse and then a lesson. There is a short prayer at the end of each with questions. Each week like each day had a title and at the end of the week an Annotation with a place to write your thoughts and feelings. This is not just like a textbook, it is also designed for note taking. It is a book that encourages critical thinking. Holidays and special events are also covered. Unlike most books in this category I found that one read through is not enough. The book itself is one that fulfills the need for Bible Study and it could well be used by every family. Thank you Sam Sorbo, this is highly recommended for all.

Excellent. This devotional is ideal for homeschoolers or teachers who work in Christian schools. Each devotional is short enough to keep students’ attention and includes Bible verses and stories of famous people (such as Corrie Ten Boom). I found the short devotional engaging and interesting. These aren’t too wordy so they will keep students’ attention and focus. Very well done. I highly recommend this book.
